From Where We Stand . . .

Animals Have Been, And Always Will Be Needed

With all the talk these days about imitation milk and meat, and the subsequent contemplation as to what part cows, swine, steers, chickens and sheep will play in the future farm, we came across a discourse given years ago by a prominent clergyman that we think is relevant to the situation.

He said; "From our earliest years our thoughts have been colored by the presence of animals. There was Noah with his ark, saving the creatures of the earth as the seed of life for a rejuvenated world. There was Jacob with his cattle, and there was Moses pointing out the Promised Land to his people as a land of milk and honey, which at least says something of cows and beasts. We read of cattle on a thousand hills as the symbol of wealth. We counted up the riches of the Patriarchs in flocks and herds. Toy animals were our first playthings, and animal pets our first companions.

"Our forebears came to America years ago on a ship. But there would have been no America to beckon them, no urge to go could have moved them and no ship would have been there to carry them, had it not been for such a humble instrumentality as the fish. For it was the fish that first lured man upon the mysterious waters and started him on that long upward course that led to modern navigation.

"When man domesticated animals and planted vines and grains he found the possibility of a settled life, because thus he was afforded a localized food supply. From his comparatively settled abode, social life advanced and wealth increased.

"Cattle as every school boy knows, became chattel, property, wealth and their very name in our Latin lessons became a synonym for money.

"How many of the arts of life we have learned by observing and utilizing animals, even today when man navigates the sky. What gave him the impulse to take wings? Birds led him into the air, as fish led him to venture and trust himself on the surface of the sea

"I doubt if any artist will ever paint a stream of tanks winding slowly over the sea at sunset, nor will the garage man folding his greasy and metallic flock at night have the romantic appeal of a mountain shepherd.

"The magi will still come riding their camels at Christmas Paul Revere will still gallop through the April night astride his horse. The ox team and covered wagon will still symbolize the pioneer. Men and animals seem to belong together in nature, and nature without animal life is unthinkable to us."

And we would add to the minister's thoughts that the dairy cow with her magnetic personality and the ability to naturally produce food components so necessary to human livelihood will never become banished from the farm scene.

And all other farm animals — pigs, steers, sheep and chickens — will always keep their place in the farmers heart and will always be needed to balance the synthetic foods dreamed up by human technology.

At least that's the way it looks from where we stand.

Obligation To Change Our Thinking

The face of America is rapidly changing, with the pace of physical alteration often exceeding the pace of planners. Man's manipulation and care of the soil and water resources has a far-reaching effect on each of us, whether urban or rural.

The people in Soil and Water Conservation work say, "In our constant quest to produce more with less for a greater profit, the view of things to come is often shadowed by today's results and lost in the cries of those who shout the loudest. The population explosion with its accompanying housing, recreational and transportation needs is causing a great change in our soil and water use. Unfortunately, this transition is not always preceded by planning with thought for future generations."

The old adage "A squeaking wheel gets the grease" may be used to describe the conditions prevalent today. Families need housing, schools, highways, a place to work. In short, they have a hunger which is being satisfied by a diet of new homes, factories and roads. But will the satisfaction of this hunger also consume the primary materials needed for future growth?

News media carry events of the day — stories their readers want to read. Good stories, although important, may easily be shunted aside for lack of space or because editors and broadcasters have news of immediate portent.

The challenge facing the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission and district directors throughout Pennsylvania's 64 Soil and Water Conservation Districts is immense. This is especially true in countries having large urban centers and news media geared to urban interests.

Ways must be found to present a program of sane land and water use to the people We can no longer prepare newsworthy material and assume it will be brought to the attention of the public through newspapers, radio and television.

Our dwindling water supply might be a starting point, but we need to pinpoint conditions directly effecting the public now — facts that editors and broadcasters will recognize as being newsworthy for their readers and listeners. We must take advantage of local conditions and limitations to bring conservation into focus. A public faced with curtailment of water for lawn, garden and car washing is likely to be receptive to actions insuring a better water supply.

Air pollution, lack of play and recreational areas for urbanites and the evolution of asphalt jungles are some of the immediate problems which could lend themselves to local or regional application of conservation planning.

Those of us involved in soil and water use have an obligation to revise our thinking and make the necessary adjustments to present our case to insure the potential development of our resources.

THE ANNOINTED

Lesson for August 4, 1968

Background Scripture: Isaiah 45.
Devotional Reading: Psalms 47.

It seems strange to think of God working in the world through ungodly men. That he should use men like Abraham, Moses, Joshua, Samuel, David, etc., is entirely understandable. Though they were not perfect, they were still men who acknowledged and tried to serve the Lord. They were sometimes spoken of as "annointed," meaning that God had set them apart for some special task.

Rev. Althouse

Lord's instrument

How then could the writer of Isaiah 45 say, "Thus says the Lord to his annointed, to Cyrus . . . "? (Isaiah 45:1) For this Cyrus was a Gentile, an idolator. Not only was he not one of the people of God, but he neither tried to serve or believed in the Lord. How could such a man be called "God's annointed"?

Cyrus was the great emperor-general of Persia, the rising power that eventually toppled the Chaldean empire. From the far reaches of that empire, the Jews had heard of this man and his armies that were swiftly crumbling the Chaldean might. They need not fear this man, the prophet is saying, for he is actually the chosen or "annointed" instrument of the Lord.

Yet, shocking as this idea may have seemed to the Jews, it was not the first time that God has used an ungodly man or nation to accomplish his purpose. Even though the Pharaohs of Egypt had not acknowledged him, nevertheless, God used them to shelter his people in time of famine, and, later, to expel the Twelve Tribes and get them started on their way to the Promised Land. Though men and nations might not co-operate with him, God used even their evil to work out his will in the world.

Unfolding purpose

This would be the case with Cyrus. He did not know God, but the Lord saw in him the potentialities to accomplish his will. Cyrus worshipped Marduk, the Persian deity, and attributed his successes to him. This did not matter to the Lord so long as Cyrus performed his task. For a time, God had used the Assyrians, then the Chaldeans (Babylonians). Now he would use the rising Persian Empire for a while. Later it would be the Macedonians, the Romans, etc. None of these people acknowledged God, but he used them all the same. Nor did they survive, for when their usefulness was ended, their mighty empires crumbled and were replaced with others.

The prophet tries to explain precisely what God will do with this man whom he has chosen. He will subdue the nations, dethrone kings, and change the existing world order. (Isaish 45:1) And the purpose of this upheaval is not to exalt or reward the Persians for their idolatry, but to bring out of captivity the people of God and move history toward the purposes of the Lord's master plan. Thus, the people of Israel were not to resist Cyrus's annointment, but accept it as the way God works in the world.

That men may know

Once again, you and I, with the advantage of time and hindsight, have no difficulty in appreciating what the prophet is saying to Israel. It does not bother us that God should use a pagan to accomplish his will. That is, it does not bother us until we face the prospect of God doing the very same thing in our world today.

It is not very pleasant to think of God "annointing" and using a man like Charles DeGaulle, Fidel Castro, Premier Kosygin, Chairman Mao, or Ho Chi Minh. Yet, as the Jews had to learn repeatedly, that is how God works in the affairs of men and nations. He might just as easily say to the "villains" of today as he did to Cyrus: "I gird you, though you do not know me . . . " Why? So "that men may know, from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me; I am the Lord and there is no other." (Isaiah 45:6 RSV)

To Keep Records Of Pesticide Use

All farmers and especially dairymen should keep accurate record of all spray materials on both crops and livestock Forms are available from our Extension Office and from many custom spray operators. These records could be very useful in the future as proof of spray practices

To Remove Bluegills

Farm pond owners are urged to permit fishing by permission in order to prevent over-population of the fish in the pond. Many ponds contain too many bluegill sunfish because they are seldom fished out; many fishermen are only interested in the large bass and will not take the time to remove the bluegills When his is the case, the bluegill population becomes so great that all fish are stunted and the reproduction of the bass is hindered.

To Control Muskrats

Several office calls regarding the management of farm ponds points out the value of the control of muskrats in the banks of the pond Many ponds have been ruined by numerous holes and muskrat dens being made in the banks. Permission should be obtained from the local game warden to trap or kill these animals out of season; however, the pond owner has the right to protect this property under the supervision of the game warden. Holes should be filled with small stones and clay and the muskrat population controlled as much as possible The placing of stones around the inside of the pond both above and below water level is giving good results in many ponds.

Most of city water in the U S. costs about a nickel a ton (250 gallons).

Control Weed Seeds; Have Better Garden

"Don't let those weeds take over your garden," says Frances R. Gouin, a University of Maryland horticulturist. They not only compete with your plants for water, nutrients, light and air, but weeds also make an excellent home for insects and disease-causing organisms," he cautioned.

One way of not being bothered with weeds for some time to come, is to do a good job controlling them for at least 2 to 3 years. Generally, complete control of weeds for one year reduces their numbers for eight years.

Each year weeds distribute billions of seeds on the soil. Depending on the type of weed, many of the seeds will germinate the first year. However, many of the seeds remain in the soil for several years before they germinate. In this way weeds insure their survival.

So it's up to you to get outside and clean up that garden now for more leisurely gardening next year.

NEW FEED for High Egg Production

BEACON Hy-Pro Mate

with higher amino acid levels for hybrid layers

Three factors are critical in determining the profitability of a flock of layers: body condition; total production; egg size. Beacon Hy-Pro Mate is a new 18% protein ration formulated to help hybrid birds reach their full inherited potential in each of these categories.

The level of critical amino acids in Beacon Hy-Pro Mate has been increased considerably over that of conventional laying diets. This sustains continued body growth and development as birds come into lay. It promotes early production of large eggs. And, the extra amino acids help birds reach full production potential through the entire laying cycle.

Call us today for full details on Beacon Hy-Pro Mate for high production, large eggs, top body condition and top profits.

Summer: Salad and Sandwich Time

SPENCE

In the heat of summer we try to spend as little time as possible in the kitchen. But, we can't neglect the nutritional needs of our family. There are many recipes for salads and sandwiches that are really "one-dish" meals but will still supply the energy and nutrition your family needs to get through a summer day. Many of these foods can be prepared ahead of time and be refrigerated or frozen, ready to serve with a minimum of fuss.

These Calico Egg Sandwiches make a luncheon or light supper entree that is easy to prepare yet fulfills nutritional requirements. You'll be serving these to your family again and again after they once taste them.

CALICO EGG SANDWICHES

- 4 hard-cooked eggs, coarsely chopped
- ¾ cup diced, cooked ham
- ½ cup grated cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup finely chopped celery
- ¼ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 4 large hard rolls, split and buttered

Combine all ingredients, mixing well; spoon on split hard rolls. Place on baking sheet and bake in a 400 degree oven until cheese starts to melt and edges of rolls are delicately browned, about 15 minutes. Makes 8 sandwiches.

DANISH EGG SALAD SANDWICH

- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- ½ cup finely chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- ¼ teaspoon Tabasco
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 slices white or rye bread

Slice two hard-cooked eggs and reserve four center slices for garnish. Chop all eggs and put in bowl. Add celery and onion to eggs and toss lightly. Stir vinegar, Tabasco and salt into mayonnaise until well blended. Pour dressing over egg mixture and stir until moistened throughout. Spread each slice of bread with butter. Cover bread with leaf of lettuce. Scoop egg salad on top of lettuce, dividing it between the four sandwiches. Top each with a reserved egg slice and pimiento strips. Makes 4 servings.

* * * *

Eliminate Seam Puckers

Easy thread tensions and easy presser foot pressure are keys to eliminating seam pucker in easy-care fabrics

Take a few minutes and experiment before you start to sew.

As you begin a sewing project, test stitch on the warp grain of the fabric so you will know if you need to adjust the top thread tension and the presser foot tension Check your machine instruction book for directions on such adjustments.

Understand your machine and keep it in good condition

How To Cook Vegetables On Outdoor Grill

You can cook vegetables in foil-wrapped bundles on the grill.

To prepare bundled vegetables, cut heavy-duty foil twice the size needed to wrap the food. You can use regular household foil cut four times the size needed.

Place the food on top of the foil just a bit off center.

Bring the foil up over the food so that the edges meet on all three sides.

Make a tight seal by folding the edges two or more times in about ½ inch folds

Press edges tightly on the three open sides so the food will be snugly wrapped.

Put the package on the grill or coals, watch carefully, and turn often to prevent burning.

Bundles will take 10 to 45 minutes to cook, depending on the vegetable.

When cooked, open one side of the package and put in serving dish. Or you can fix individual servings in separate bundles and eat directly from the foil.

To cook frozen foods in foil, add butter, salt, and pepper if you wish. A little water is usually necessary for proper cooking.

Would You Buy Frozen Meat?

New technology provides high-quality frozen meat. It's frozen 30 to 50 degrees below zero. As a result, beef keeps its bright red color.

New frozen meat may possibly help hold prices down because freezing prevents waste.

Retailers and processors know they can sell a top-quality frozen product at a lower cost.

Clean Outdoor Furniture

It takes more than rain to keep outdoor furniture clean and attractive, says Mrs. Helen Puskar, Penn State extension home furnishings specialist It takes sudsy water and effort on your part, and the cooperation of family members. Suitable equipment, such as brushes for scrubbing, sponges, several two-inch paint brushes for cleaning hard-to-get-at places, clean cloths for wiping furniture, plenty of soap, a hose, will help to make the cleaning easier.

Correspondence Courses

GRAINS LIKE BANK MONEY

Grains in their storage bins are like money in the bank to livestock farmers, according to a Pennsylvania State University correspondence course on grain crops. Abundant hay and pasture make a low cost feeding program. But for high quality pork and beef and to keep dairy cows in good flesh, grains are needed.

Wheat, corn, oats, barley — home grown — complement a farm's forage crops. High yields are needed for economical production.

High yields result from a combination of expert management, good seed, fertile soil—taught in the Penn State course. To enroll, send your name and address with $2.00 to Grain Crops, Box 5000, University Park, Pennsylvania 16802. Make checks payable to PENN STATE. A course copy will come by mail.

Colds cost the American people almost as much yearly as educating their children does.

off amount 1/10 of 1% of which is forwarded to the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council where 90% will be deducted to carry on the state program and the remaining 10% will be forwarded to the National Pork Producers Council to support their program. Feeder pig producers are asked to contribute 2c per pig sold.

"You should give serious consideration to this program as it is the first concentrated self help program on an industry-wide basis to promote your product and support research work to improve your efficiency Success depends on the ground roots of the swine industry, you the swine producer; and failure of this voluntary pork promotion could initiate a referendum and a mandatory program, an unvoluntary and more costly means to achieve the same goal

"Nickels obtained already for the National Pork Producers Council have been put to use in production research, farm-level production, trichinosis eradication, consumer surveys advertising, and expanded National Meat Board programs. Nickel deductions have now passed the three million hog level nationally and over twenty thousand in Pennsylvania.

"Several local market buying places are cooperating in the program. Deductions can be made just by ASKING these buyers to withdraw it and the money will be forwarded to the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council No matter the size of your operation, ten hogs or one thousand, your contribution will be a determining factor in the future of swine business"

The letter was signed by John Henkel president: Mark Nestleroth, vice president and Jim Horton, secretary-treasurer.
